Hawaii House of Representatives to honor Kahuku High School teams for exceptional athletic and academic achievement teams were recognized on March 18, 2013 at the Hawaii House of Representatives Chamber for outstanding achievement.

Representative Richard Fale (District 47) offered the floor presentation commending Kahuku High School State Champion teams for athletic and academic performances. The 2012 Division I State Champion varsity football team earned a perfect 12-0 record and continues Kahuku's strong football tradition of excellence. Additionally, the school's "We

Two Kahuku High School the People: The Citizen and the Constitution" team won the state competition of the educational civic engagement program.

> Six of the past eight NFL Super Bowls have featured a Kahuku High School graduate. The team is gaining a national reputation for producing standout college and National Football League (NFL) players.

> "We the People" encourages critical thinking about civics by requiring students to submit essays and face a live panel of judges to test their knowledge of the U.S. Constitution. The team will go on to represent Hawaii at the national finals in April in Washington, D.C.

now is not a good time for a gas tax increase

An indisputable element of success for a company, an organization or a novel idea is good timing. The critical timing of an investment can mean the difference between bonus and bankruptcy. Government operations are also impacted by this rule of success. Mayor Caldwell served as the City's Managing Director and previously as the House Majority Leader before becoming the chief executive officer for the City. He knows that budget deliberations are critically affected by timing. A robust economy can justify program expansion or a hefty increase in capitol improvement projects, but an economic downturn can make even the most practical public works project look like an extravagance. Such was the case with the Mayor's proposal to increase the fuel tax by 5 cents a gallon. The Council is very supportive of restoring full bus service and no one would really argue with the Mayor's ultimate goal of upgrading the city's infrastructure. But only $3.5 million of the $15 million generated by the tax increase each year was to go to funding full bus service. The rest would have been used to cover part of the debt incurred by borrowing $750 million dollars for road work over the next five years. I am reminded of a similarly ambitious plan in 2009 when a proposal for $150 million dollars of city road work to be completed over a period of 18 months was announced. Except for the press release, there is little evidence remaining that it was once a goal of the city administration. There is now serious doubt that the city would be able to execute contracts for such an extraordinary amount of road repair and maintenance, yet all the while Oahu drivers would be paying the highest gas tax in the country. At a recent budget briefing, testimony from the Department of Design and Construction on existing balances for prior fiscal years revealed that only $1 million of the $100 million appropriated by the Council for road repair last year has been spent to date, nine months into the fiscal year. If suspicions about the city's ability to manage such a large scale project were not reason enough, the current economic climate makes it just about the worst time to suggest raising taxes. Hawaii is already among the top ten states with the highest taxes on the poor. Moreover, low- and middle-income families pay a higher percentage of their income on gasoline and typically have the longest commutes to work. Although the Mayor contends that the average motorist would only have to pay $21.45 more a year with the increase, the actual amount would surely be higher as all consumers would have to bear the corresponding increase in the cost of doing business on Oahu. While the fuel tax increase was born of good intentions, bad timing resulted in an early rejection of the impractical and unpopular propos-

FIGHTING TO KEEP THE COST OF LIVING DOWN

We are at the midpoint of the 2013 legislative session. My concern is for the members of my community and for all struggling families in the State of Hawai'i that are just trying to work, put food on the table and keep a roof over their heads. We live in the most isolated state in our nation, as an island state the majority of our food and energy must be imported which accounts for the high cost of living in the State of Hawai'i. I feel it is the responsibility of government to do its part to keep taxes down and help out the many people in our state that are living from paycheck to paycheck.

There is some good news; HB 694 passed out of the House and is currently in the Senate. HB 694 will repeal the increase in tax that resulted from Act 60 (in 1990) by changing the sunset date from December 31, 2015 to December 31, 2014. This means tax rates will be reduced one year sooner than current statute.

There are some bills that I voted against that I am happy to report did not move forward to the Senate. These bills would have increased taxes, fees and the overall cost of living for the people of Hawai'i.

HB 1368 – This bill would have increased the general excise tax in our state. Hawai'i has no sales tax; instead we have a general excise tax which is a pyramiding tax that is charged for every good and service in our state. This hurts the poor the most since it includes food and medicine. I opposed this measure which was defeated in the House.

HB 357 – This bill charges a 10 cent fee for each single-use checkout bag used. There are a few exceptions to this rule. The fee may also increase to 25 cents in 2016 if the Department of Health does not find a reduction of single-use checkout bags. I opposed this measure which was defeated in the House.

Here are some of the bills that are from the Senate that the House is now considering.

SB 345 – This is a bill that raises, "fees related to portable electronics insurance licenses." The fee is currently $150. Surprisingly, the fee may be raised to $5,000. This is a fee that will be paid by electronics retailers in Hawaii. Therefore, the fee will be passed on to consumers. I opposed this measure.

SB 1133 – This bill removes the exemption for dietary supplement beverages described as, "a liquid which is deemed to be the sole item of a meal or a diet." My concern is that this measure will impact seniors who often consume these types of beverages. Seniors are also often on a fixed income and this will make it even more difficult for them to pay the bills. I opposed this measure.

Representative Lauren CheapeServing You in District 45

Aloha,

One of the biggest concerns currently facing our State is how to perpetuate local small businesses. The most direct way that the Legislature can help is by doing everything that it can to lower the cost of doing business within our State. One example of a way that I am trying to address this is through a feed subsidy for fishery operators, aquaculturists, hydroculturists, ranchers, and farmers of all varieties. As the cost of feed and its shipping continue to rise, and until we develop local sources of feed to serve as an alternative, these farmers are forced to buy feed from the mainland regardless of price. A feed subsidy would immediately lower the cost of production for these farmers which would, in turn, lower the cost of the fish, produce, eggs, and meat that they yield, making it more competitive compared to the imported alternative. This is an example of the type of common-sense solutions that we, as a State, need to be looking for, and it's specifically what I, as a Legislator, am working to achieve.

I don't intend to belabor the point, however, I cannot adequately stress how crucial it is that you submit testimony on Bills that are of importance to you. Public testimony is the Number One resource that Legislators utilize to inform their decisions. State law requires just forty-eight hours public notice of upcoming committee hearings, so as you can imagine, it is very easy to lose track of Bills as they move through the legislative process. The best way to stay informed is through the Capitol website, www.Capitol.Hawaii.gov, where you can sign up for email alerts for when specific Bills that are of interest to you come up for consideration. The Public Access Room (http://Hawaii.gov/lrb/par) remains an excellent resource for assistance with this process. As well, I am more than happy to assist you in any way that I can. Please send me an email at RepCheape@ Capitol.Hawaii.gov with any questions that you may have. If you would also like to be added to my email list, another great resource to help you stay informed, simply email me indicating your desire to be added and what issues are of importance to you.

Finally, I would like to congratulate Waialua High School's Randiann Porras-Tang, recipient of the 2012 Metlife/National Association of Secondary School Principals Hawaii High School Principal of the Year Award! Mrs. Porras-Tang has shown remarkable dedication to the students at Waialua High and she serves as a prime example for Principals across the State. Mahalo nui loa for everything that you've done for our community and I wish you the best of luck as you continue to enhance Waialua High.

Transient Global Anemia

Transient Global Anemia (TGA) is a condition characterized by an abrupt onset of severe memory loss of recent events. There are no physical neurological symptoms such as loss of speech or paralysis. The person is alert and has intact intellectual abilities, such as language, reasoning and abstract thinking. However, the person is anxious and seems to be disoriented as to time and place. This attack usually has a duration of 1-8 hours and should not last more than 24 hours. During this period, the person is not able to make new memories resulting in asking the same question over and over. "Where am I? What are we doing here?" At the end of the episode, there is a rapid return of recent memory, although some memory loss can last for months. Since the person loses the ability to "make memories" during the "attack," the person may never to be able to recall the episode at all.

TGA was first described in 1956. It has an incidence of 5 per 100,000 people per year and affects people in the 40-80 age range. TGA affects males and females equally. It is diagnosed by excluding other possible disorders, such as mini-strokes, seizures, psychological amnesias and confusional states. Diagnostic tests include CT scans, MRI, blood tests and EEG (brain wave tracing). The TGA diagnosis must fit the following criteria: the episode must be witnessed by someone; there is a sudden onset of amnesia of recent events; no alteration in consciousness; no loss of personal identity; no physical neurological symptoms such as speech impediment or muscle weakness; no history of recent head trauma or seizure; must resolve within 24 hours; and other causes of amnesia need to be ruled out.

What causes TGA? There is no agreement on the cause. However, things that can trigger TGA include physical exertion, overwhelming emotional stress, pain, cold water exposure, sexual intercourse, and maneuvers such as straining. Recurrence of TGA is rare and there is no treatment because it is unnecessary.

Koʻolauloa and North Shore to rally for hope with American Cancer Society

In 1985, one man who wanted to make a difference in the fight against cancer ran 83 miles in 24 hours. Now 3.5 million Americans, follow in his footsteps by participating in the American Cancer Society Relay For Life. Relayers from Oahu's Koʻolauloa and North Shore Communities will demonstrate their commitment to end cancer and bring hope and healing by hosting the Relay for Life Koʻolauloa from 6:00 p.m. May 24 through 6:00 a.m. May 25, 2013 at Kahuku District Park.

The overnight activity brings together communities across nearly 50 miles of the North Shore for 12 hours of fun activities, great entertainment and 'ono food. The annual event helps raise money for the American Cancer Society and provides a way for communities to celebrate loved ones who have battled cancer, remember those lost and to come together to fight back against the disease.

Relay for Life Koʻolauloa is looking for businesses, community organizations and individuals to participate in this life-changing event by forming or joining a team and getting involved in the planning of this special event. To learn more, please contact Don Porter, Event Chair, at 808-548-8444 or rflkoolauloa@gmail.com or visit www.relayforlife.org/koolauloa.

Hawai'i Polo Club announces 2013 season and 50th anniversary of Hawai'i Polo Club

The Hawai'i Polo Club has announced its 2013 polo season which, for the first time, will split the season with a hiatus in mid-summer. The new format is announced as the Club celebrates its 50th anniversary as Hawai'i Polo Club.

The Spring Season launches on Sunday, April 7 and ends Sunday, July 14. The Fall Season begins on September 1st and ends on Sunday, October 27th. All matches occur on Sundays at 2:00 p.m.; gates open at 11:00 a.m. for picnics.

Mike Dailey, president of the Hawai'i Polo Club, stated that the split season allows the polo field and the ponies to recover from the physical impacts of the rigorous sport. It will also offer corporate sponsors the opportunity to purchase half-season sponsorships.

Everyone is welcome to come to the official opening ceremonies and the first match on April 7. The teams playing will be Wealth Strategy Partners against Equus Hotel. Players include familiar North Shore names like Mike Dailey, Chris Dawson, Raymond Noh and Julian Alvarez.

Sky Dive Hawai'i will come sailing down from above during the half time break and Blue Light Funk Music will play great music until dusk. "This is the North Shore's playground," said Dailey. "There are only a few places in the country where you can see the excitement of a polo match; and Hawai'i is one of them. In fact, we are the state that introduced polo to the U.S."

Polo is believed to be the oldest organized sport in the world, with the first matches being played in Persia over 2500 years ago. Matches could resemble a battle with up to 100 men to a side. Today, the teams comprise four players; and the women are right out there mixing it up with the men. In fact, Hawai'i's own Noelani Picollo is Hawai'i Polo Club's youngest woman team member at the age of 15!

Plan to spend your Sundays enjoying the gorgeous views and unspoiled beach along Mokule'ia and watching this fast-paced game with heart-stopping moves! See you at the matches!

Notes from Waimea Valley Botanical Garden David Orr, Botanical Collections Specialist

Waimea Valley is located across from Waimea Bay on O`ahu's North Shore. Our plant collections are developed and maintained to support scientific investigation, hands-on cultural education, and plant conservation. There are 41 garden collections grouped according to geographical region of origin, genus or family. Many of the rarest flowers and fruit on display at Waimea can only be seen here and in their distant places of origin.

Passionfruit: Hikers often come upon this common exotic weed-fruit growing from vines which drape from trees along the higher slopes of many valleys. The most common edible one is Passiflora edulis forma flavicarpa. The thick yellow-skinned rind protects the edible seeds which you crunch while drinking the tart juice held in many little clear sacks. Our local name, liliko'i, refers to the valley on Maui where it had already naturalized by the 1870's. "Flavicarpa" means yellow fruit, and the beautiful, complicated flowers of this form open in the afternoon. The smaller purple variety, forma edulis, sometimes called the purple grenadilla, has flowers that open at dawn, and it's found at higher elevations. It's more common in the subtropics, while the yellow form dominates in Hawai'i.

All passiflora are invasive, and one particularly aggressive species, P. mollisima, the "banana poka", has smothered many Hawaiian plants in higher elevations. Our worst Passiflora weed species in Waimea Valley is the small-fruited P. suberosa, with leaves that start with one point , but become star-shaped as the vine climbs. The flowers and green-turning-to-black fruit are less than an inch, and you can always recognize this species by tracing the vine to where it's coming out of the ground. "Suberosa" means almost corky, and the vine develops white flaky ridges with age.

Two delicious species are found in gardens. P. laurifolia has a purple flower, shiny, entire (lobeless) leaves and a dusty-looking orange fruit. Less common and recently planted at Waimea is the giant grenadilla, P. quadrangularis, with a squarish, almost football-sized fruit with the flavor of cantaloupe. Another naturalized species found at low elevation is P. subpeltata with a sweet, light-orange fruit similar to P. laurifolia. This species has light green leaves that look like three round-ended leaves fused together.

Early missionaries in South America went to great lengths to convince the indigenous people that the many parts of the wondrous passionflower were symbolic of the events of Christ's crucifiction, called the Passion. The different connotations of the word today leads to some comical misunderstanding of the nature (and effect) of the fruit.

Celebration of Life

by Mike Willenborg

This is a story about a really good man who has fallen on some really tough times. On his 20th birthday, Dion Ripp moved to the North Shore of Oahu in 1981 from Santa Cruz. He loved to surf and especially the big waves. After surfing "Pigeon Point," later named "Mavericks," he was in search of a better life and year round waves. Mark Foo was kind enough to rent him a room and show him the ropes. Lani's 10 feet on a 6'4" was his first day out. And so he begins his life on the North Shore. As a carpenter, he found work, moved to Sunset, rented from Mick O'Brien and settled in a North Shore lifestyle.

In 1982 Dion met his future wife, Yvette and has been happily married for 28 years. He is a great family man with the blessing of Tehani and Nate, his two kids and Kaikila his grandson.

Dion has always been a low key dude. In the late 80's he was known as "the guy who caught the big shark," the 18 foot plus tiger shark that attacked Wayne Chun and luckily only bit a big chunk of his board. The following day he and Perry Dane went out and killed the beast.

Also, during the late 80's, Dion was towing with the likes of Garrett McNamara and Steve Poor with his 15" Power Skiff into the big waves before tow-in surfing changed to what it is today. His resume is long on accomplishments but prefers a low profile life with family and friends.

As an accomplished carpenter, Dion was building additions and was lead framer on million dollar houses. All was going well for Dion until summer of 2011 when he was almost left for dead after being found unconscious on the back motorcross trails in Kahuku from a gnarly crash. After weeks in the hospital recovering from the accident, the doctors delivered bad news, Dion also had stage 3 multiple myeloma

(a form of bone cancer). Not a good day for Dion or his family.

He and his family decided they were going to fight, it wasn't Dion's time to go. Too much life and love left to share. After rounds of chemotherapy, lots of prayer and healthy living, the cancer seemed to be in a holding pattern.

Things had stabilized and other than out of work, life was getting better with lots of love and optimism, until mid-November of 2011. Dion was helping a friend supervise moving a building, when a freak accident occurred. Oncce again Dion finds himself struggling for his life. After 2 months in the hospital and 1 month at home, he now goes on short hikes and is slowly getting his strength and spirit back. He is just amazing, defying all medical odds. He is here to stay. Dion and his family are now trying to put together a 2 or 3 month trip to a mainland hospital for special stem cell procedure with the hope of extending his life.

We are having a "Celebration of Life" on April 6, for a beautiful family and a courageous man. Please join us.

BANZAI NORTH SHORE WIRELESS

John John Florence kicked out of the first leg of the ASP World Tour. This is looking bad for the young surfer who hoped to make a charge for a World Title this season. Florence suffered what is being called an ankle sprain with a bit of tendon strain, while doing an air maneuver during an expression session at Snapper Rocks, Aust. The 6 foot tall Florence, 20, was rated 4th last season and has bowed out of three events, he arrived home last week. Florence also suffered a broken ankle on a trip to Mexico a while back, we hope not the same one. Surfing injuries sometimes last for years or come back to haunt you later in life. An ankle sprain is not considered one of the top five surf injuries. The top five are lacerations, head injuries, shoulder damage, contusions and back sprains and strains. The list could change as more and more high risk moves like John John's air are being done. Surfers do not stretch enough so take that extra ten before you paddle out and remember "RICE" rest, ice, compression and elevation after an injury!

Dusty Payne, Maui, was in the same position with an injury laden tour last season but has broken the spell finally winning an event. It was a double double when he and Hawaii's Carissa Moore won the Drug Aware Margarete River Pro. Both beat a respectable crew of surfers to win. Carissa surfed against Taylor Wright in the final and Payne, who grew up on the North Shore, took it from Josh Kerr. The event was a top tier event for the Womens WCT putting Moore in 2nd place in the overall standings. "I'm feeling really, really amazing right now!" said Moore. "I'm stoked to walk away with the win and to be up on the podium again. I didn't win an event last year, and it was hard for me, but it definitely fired me up."

Payne has never won an event and was over the moon. "I've never won anything before, this is sick!," Payne said. "This is my first major win and this is an awesome event. I was in good rhythm at the event, which never happens, lucky I guess. I was injured for half of last year and had to sit on the sidelines and watch my friends surf and win events, and now here I am. It feels great." Bells is the next big event that Florence will miss. Go Hawaii!

The fourth season (2012/2013) of the Big Wave World Tour has officially concluded. This year's award ceremony is earlier than years past in order to clear the schedule for the first event on the BWWT schedule, The Punta de Lobos, Chile. The holding period for the event runs from April 1st to May 31st 2013. The tour was founded by legendary surfer and shaper Gary Linden. Tour organizers, led by Linden, closely monitor weather patterns for ideal conditions. Surfers are given services including photos and video!

Tatiana Weston-Webb Scores a tube ride the win and the Gold Ring at Pipeline Pro

2 days to arrived at events. California's Greg Long, San Clemente, has been crowned champion of this year's Big Wave World Tour. Long made national headlines earlier this season for a wipeout at Cortes Bank off Southern California that nearly cost him his life. In the three events that made up this year's season, Long made the final in all three, putting him just ahead of runner-up Jamie Sterling of Hawaii. Sterling is a professional big wave surfer who travels around the world in search of big waves. Sterling is a North Shore Local and is known for charging the biggest waves including tow-in surfing. Check him out at http://professionalsurfguide.com.

Final Standings are as follows.

1st Greg Long (USA) 2nd Jamie Sterling (HAW) 3rd Carlos Burle (BRA) 4th Peter Mel (USA)

Pipeline has not stopped breaking! The late season waves were a plus for the Surf n Sea Pipeline Womens Pro presented by San Lorenzo Bikinis. The contest happened the first three days of the waiting period which included the North Shore Surf Shop Mens Pipe Pro Jr. Kalani David won the Pro Jr. which started in solid 8-10 foot surf. On the ladies side Tatiana Weston-Webb from Kauai was the big winner taking home the trophy and a solid gold "wave ring" from Windward Jewelers. Tatiana scored a deep tube ride earning her the ring. In the Womens bodyboarding final defending champion Karla Costa Taylor reined supreme with a ten point "air roll spin" maneuver in the final. Taylor is so solid at Pipeline she has won the event over 5 times. It was another Jr surfer that won the Open Womens. Dax McGill cruised past the contingent in the 4-6 foot surf to score the win. McGill lives right up the road from Pipeline and looked pretty comfortable surfing the lefts. Congratulations to all the wahine!

Waialua - The Saga of the North Shore

Chapter 30 - La'anui Ka Keiki

By Kalewa

Kamehameha fought his final battle for supremacy of the Big Island near Hilo, after he had conquered Maui and O`ahu. In 1796 a faction of old line Maui chiefs had stirred rebellion in eastern Hawai`i. Kamehameha generally liked to keep his high chiefs as close to court as possible, especially those considered less reliable. So it was that the Waimea chief Nuhi, who had relatively recently become an ally of Kamehameha's and his pregnant, Maui-born wife, Kaohelelani, were amongst the chiefs who traveled with the king as he extinguished the final embers of resistance on his home island. And that is why La`anui was born in Hilo.

Once the most worrisome ali`i had been dealt with, the remainder of the high chiefs were "invited" to reside at court, along with their entire families. La`anui's father, Nuhi, had behaved well enough for long enough to return to his lands in Waimea, which was only a day away from Kamehameha's court at Kailua, Kona.

La`anui's earliest memories were, at the age of four, when he stood amongst the chiefly young-sters who witnessed Kamehameha standing at the edge of a flowing river of lava issuing from Hualalai. The story was told over and over how the warrior king cut off his own hair and cast it into the molten stream, commanding Pele to cease her destruction of his favorite fish-ponds. La`anui was awe struck when she did.

The lad was about five years old when he boarded a huge war-canoe under his father's command, in the squadron belonging to Ke`eaumoku. The fleet consisted of hundreds of large double-hulled canoes, some up to 60 feet in length and mostly rigged in the western fashion. He took his place as a young ali`i in the formal religious and political processions and re-dedications of important heiau between the Big Island and O`ahu. He would always remember the grandeur and opulent protocol when Kamehameha or his young son Liholiho sought the assistance of the innumerable gods by following ancient, sometimes bloody, protocol. The fleet stayed in Lahaina for nearly a year before continuing on to O`ahu in preparation for the final thrust to Kaua`i.

Nuhi's men were garrisoned on the North Shore and were supposed to be amongst the vanguard of the upcoming invasion. Like most of the ali'i youth, La'anui was kept near court at Waikiki. He was often chosen to crew the rowing canoes for the warrior chiefs when they wanted to surf the waves of Waikiki, Waianae or the North Shore. Crewing for the ruling chiefs like Kamehameha, Ke'eaumoku, and Kalanimoku was way more fun than surfing with the fishermen because the higher the rank of the steersman the greater the possibility of utter destruction of the canoe. The chiefs had no regard whatsoever for the safety of the canoe, the crew. or anybody who got in their way. They were utterly fearless and they were great fun!!

As a youngster of some rank growing up in those days, La`anui was familiar with westerners and spent many nights aboard ships anchored off-shore or in Honolulu Harbor. He fell ill along with everybody in town when the tragic `Oku`u struck down so many. His grief at loosing his father was shared with the other chiefs who were loosing family members at an alarming rate.

He became particularly close to an older distant cousin. His chief's second daughter, Pi`ia, was a few years older and somewhat larger but they became fast friends. Those two were playing privately behind a pile of mats when they overheard the plot to poison Kaumuali`i when he came over from Kaua`i to cede his holdings to Kamehameha. La`anui leaked the rumor to his Haole Uncle, Isaac Davis who intervened in the conspiracy, only to be poisoned himself.

La`anui would never forget the day he was called to court by Ka`ahumanu. The king was still ill, but it was clear he approved of his favorite's decision to have her younger sister formally attached to such a fine young man. Thus it was that, at the age of fourteen, La`anui was wed, in the chiefly fashion, to his good friend, the high chiefess Pi`ia.

Ko'olauloa Sustainable Communties Plan Update

making a decision on the draft Ko'olauloa Sustainable Communities Plan (KSCP) on March 20th, following a request made by Department of Planning and Permitting (DPP) planner Raymond Young.

Mr. Young cited the need for an extension because DPP was "not ready with the numbers for zoning" (referring to several questions asked by Commissioners during a hearing on the KSCP March 6th about numbers used for DPP decision-making regarding the proposed up-zoning of agricultural land). Mr. Young also mentioned that his Department was still "crunching the numbers" pertaining to the controversial document.

This is surprising information, considering Mr. Young's testimony during the March 6th Planning Commission public hearing in Kaneohe. At that time, Mr. Young told Commissioners that the KSCP had been "planned to death" and needed to be "pushed out" without further delay.

Unable to find answers to the Commission's questions about the flawed DPP draft for the past two weeks however, it seems that Mr. Young has discovered that this SCP wasn't planned thoroughly enough. The attempt to push the draft past the Commission has also exposed improper consultation with special interests and community exclusion from the City & County planning process.

The most contentious aspect of the DPP draft of the KSCP is a massive development proposal known as "Envision La'ie". This proposal is predicated upon a supposed need to expand the campus of Brigham Young University Hawaii (BYUH). Development would entail construction of a new town between La'ie and Kahuku in the ahupua'a known as Malaekahana. The new town would be larger than both La'ie and Kahuku and would include a commercial center, a light industrial park, churches, a school, market housing and "affordable" housing units.

DPP threw out a public version of the KSCP after

The Honolulu Planning Commission deferred meeting behind closed doors with interests from Hawaii Reserves Inc. (HRI) - the development company of the Church of Latter Day Saints (Mormons) and Turtle Bay Resort. The public version, drafted by the Public Advisory Committee (a moku-wide representative body which was assembled by DPP), focused on sustainability and keeping Ko'olauloa "country".

> Changes made by the Department focused instead on urbanization of the rural areas of Malaekahana, La'ie and Kahuku and reflected the wishes of HRI and Turtle Bay Resort instead of those of the community. The Planning Commission is tasked with reviewing the drastic changes recommended by DPP, and in light of public testimony, those changes have proven hard to defend.

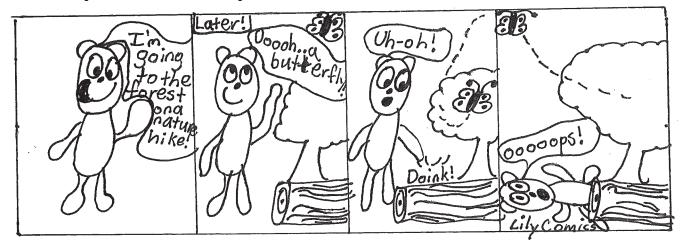

> The large majority of Ko'olauloa residents who were not compensated to testify at a recent hearing were adamantly opposed to the proposed revision. Unfortunately testimony from many residents of La'ie, the primary beneficiary of urbanization of the region, focused on a selfish desire for unsustainable population growth. Approximately 100 HRI, BYUH and PCC employees and students were transported, fed and given time off to 'fill the room with blue shirts' (supporting the development plan).

> Before HRI began the frenzied call for urbanization, the KSCP was a plan that residents felt could meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. Now it is not.

> DPP has two more weeks to find answers for a plan many in the community have begun to term "Envasion La'ie" or simply "the shibai plan".

> We feel that adequate response and sufficient planning should be prerequisite to any approval for the KSCP moving forward. The Planning Commission will be continuing this agenda item in a decision-making hearing on Wednesday, April 3rd at 1:30 p.m. at the Mission Memorial Auditorium next to Honolulu Hale. 5th Annual Business Expo presented by Turtle Bay Resort

"Prepare Today, Succeed Tomorrow"

Registration is open for the North Shore Chamber of Commerce's 5th Annual Business Expo Friday, May 10 at Turtle Bay Resort. The event is sponsored by Turtle Bay Resort, Hawaii Human Resources, Kamehameha Schools, First Hawaiian Bank, North Shore News, American Savings and Barefoot Wine & Bubbly.

Primarily an educational and networking opportunity for the North Shore business community, this year's Expo is emphasizing informing businesses about upcoming changes for which they will need to prepare. One of the biggest changes will be the implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act known as Obama care (ACA) which will go into effect January 1, 2014.

The Expo begins at 8:00 a.m. with registration, then a panel discussion on "The New Health Care Law and What It Will Mean to You" will kick-start the day off. The panel will include Tom Matsuda ACA Implementation Manager from the Governor's office, Rose Hughes from the Hawaii Health Connector, Mike Cheng, Senor VP of HMSA, Matt Delaney CEO of Hawaii Human Resources, and Dr. Christopher Flanders Executive Director of the Hawaii Medical Association. The panel will look at the impact of the reform legislation starting from a macro policy view to the micro level of patient care.

A full day of seminars will be presented including topics covering Marketing, Social Media, Tax Changes, New Food Safety Laws, Managing Multiple Priorities, Implementing the ACA, Surviving the Economic Downturn, and possibly others. A continental breakfast, lunch and cocktail reception following the Expo will be included in the registration fee.

Chamber members, non-members, and residents are all welcome. Discounted "early bird" registration is available through Friday, April 5th with a deadline to register on May 3rd. To register or for more information, please visit www.GoNorthShore. org or call the Chamber at (808) 637-4558.

MISCELLANEOUS

During a recent vacation to Hawaii I misplaced my credit card and didn't notice it missing until we were on our plane back to Canada. I was able to trace my whereabouts from the history in my phone and realized I must have lost it at Cholos restaurant on the North Shore. I called as soon as we got home and sure enough it was there. What a relief! I gave them my mailing info and just a week later my card was back where it belonged. Thank you again to the staff at Cholos for wonderful margaritas and nachos and for looking after my card!
