Gliding through the skies of the North Shore

Soaring high above the beaches of the North Shore, we brace ourselves for an adventure that words cannot describe. Piloting this journey is Merle "the claw" Clawson a man of many stories and just as many years in the sky, 40 to be exact. Claw came to the North Shore in 1967 and after several years sailing around the world with his family he decided to come back and make this home. Today we are making this journey in a German built self-propelled glider, a vessel that has the capacity to move on its own power or the power of the mighty skies, Wind. All I can say is wow what better a way to see the real beauty of the untouched mountains and landscape of this island. The Glider Connection is a hidden gem out of Dillingham Field that offers this adventure. They offer four packages or can tailor a flight to meet what you are looking for, and for the adrenaline junkie they also offer an acrobatic flight. This is a definite must for all to experience. See the North Shore from a whole new prospective I guarantee you will not be disappointed.

2012 election results reason for hope

It has been one of the most exciting elections in decades. With close races at every level of government prompting an above average voter turnout, the 2012 election is one for the history books. President Obama's victory reaffirmed the appeal of his message of going forward with his plans for affordable healthcare, economic growth, clean energy policies and tax cuts for companies to bring jobs back to the United States. But a narrow victory means that a great number of people are restless and will be more than mildly critical of the President's efforts to deliver on his promises over the next four years.

Here at home, the voter turnout surprised election officials with long lines at many locations and even running out of ballots at more than a dozen voting places. Hawaii's congressional delegation remains democratic and the public certainly benefited from spirited and pointed debates that helped to both define the issues and voter preferences. The close results of the Mayor's race also represent a significant challenge to the incoming Kirk Caldwell administration. It is going to take all of his legislative skill and stamina to deliver on his campaign

Waimea Valley Park will be featuring a special display from November 12, 2012 to December 20, 2012, showcasing the Hawaiian winners of the Vans Triple Crown of Surfing. The display will include the personal surfboards and bibliographical information for Michael Ho, Derek Ho, Kaipo Jaquias, Myles Padaca, Sunny Garcia, Andy Irons and the defending champion John John Florence! Also featured will be a pictorial tribute to the founder of the Triple Crown of Surfing, Randy Rarick. The organizer of this tribute, 76 year old "Hurricane Bob" Brown, the current Hawaiian Surfing Association State champion in the "Golden Legends" division. Be sure to drop by to see this special display near the front greeting desk at the main entrance. E Komo Mai!

promise to successfully complete the rail system while simultaneously managing the maintenance of an aging city infrastructure.

The task will be made easier with the help of the Honolulu City Council which will convene in January with four new members, all of whom have extensive legislative experience and all of whom have expressed support for the rail project. The Council is prepared to officially accept the Full Funding Grant Agreement which will mean $1.55 billion federal dollars towards the cost of construction. The project will be a boost to our local construction industry, still at 30% below the peak of 2007, bringing blessed relief from the deep slump of the recession. Although economic recovery technically began over three years ago, growth has been slow and unemployment remains high across the country. Job creation is the overriding issue both nationally and here at home in Hawaii.

A new Mayor and a new mix at the Honolulu City Council is the start of a new beginning and reason for hope and optimism. Before moving on, I want to acknowledge the hard work and dedication of outgoing Mayor Peter Carlisle and his administration. The November 6th election set the political stage for 2013 and I look forward to working together with Mayor Caldwell and my colleagues on the City Council for the benefit of all of the residents of our island home.

North Shore Real Estate Trends

Richard D. Sterman
(R) of Sterman Realty

The Price of a North Shore Home

The price of a home is affected by many things, like the economy, the location, the view, etc. It is also affected by the environment.

We have the "best weather on the planet" and, of course, these North Shore environmental positives:

-The SURFING environment was what originally attracted many to specific neighborhoods like Sunset Beach and Pipeline.

-The COUNTRY atmosphere and large view lots, like those of Pupukea, attracted many residents looking for elbow room.

-The HISTORIC HALEIWA TOWN feel attracted many that were looking for a quaint country town atmosphere.

In the same way - the environment can also have negative affects:

-The TURTLE TRAFFIC mess has caused many residents on the Sunset Side of Laniakea to re-think living there.

-The KAWAIOLOA WIND FARM has created less than favorable views as you look up from Waimea or across from Pupukea and Waialua.

-The quaint HALEIWA TOWN atmosphere is starting to lose its' charm when huge tour busses line the roads with their motors running.

So, why even bring this up? It's not to be negative. It's to encourage people to become "Pro-Active!" This is our North Shore and we should be the community that decides, with aloha, how our environment will look and feel!

What can we do?

-We can create rules for the Laniakea parking lot that would forbid Tour Busses from stopping on the mauka side of the highway.

-We can have better planning so we don't find ourselves looking at huge windmills from pristine locations or from our family homes!

-And we can have better planning for Historic Haleiwa Town with off-street Tour Bus parking areas and sidewalks so all can walk safely through the town.

Aloha First Wind and North Shore News,

I would just like to express my feelings and opinions on your Kawailoa Wind Farm project. While I am a firm believer in sustainable energy within our borders and all for decreasing our need for foreign oil and lessening our carbon footprint, I am so sad to see what has been done to our aina on the cliffs above Waimea Valley. In your effort to let's just say "appease" the residents of the North Shore by taking a full page in the North Shore News to explain (in your opinion) what the wind farm is doing for the North Shore, I really wonder what you are looking at . . . You have taken one of the most historic, most beautiful valleys in all of Hawaii and not only desecrated the land, but have permanently ruined the look and awe of one of Hawaii's most beautiful features. You state in your "ad" (because that's really what it is) "We hope that residents appreciate this perspective and see the inner beauty that the project brings to complement the natural scenery." How in the world could "inner beauty" bring forth a compliment to natural scenery? Maybe when it comes to human beings we should look for "inner beauty," and not judge a person by their "looks," but we are not dealing with the looks of a human being, we are looking at what "WAS" natural scenery. I was just recently sailing along the coast of the North Shore and saw the project from the ocean and it brought tears to my eyes, very sad. It's very strange that I have yet to speak to one person who likes what they see and sees the "inner beauty" that you have created. I also don't believe for one minute that there is not one place out here that offers the same amount of wind than our precious valley.

Sadly, Scott Langford

Patsy Gibson to be Honored as 2012 North Shore Kama'aina of the Year
Long-time North Shore Outdoor Circle Advocate to be Recognized at Annual North Shore Chamber of Commerce Christmas Party & Auction

Patsy Gibson has lived in Hawaii for nearly 60 years - the last 24 in her dream town of Waialua. She'll tell you how lucky she is to have had so many interests that have led her to a rich variety of volunteer activities.

Her exceptional soprano voice found her singing in the Honolulu Symphony Chorus, the Madrigal Singers at Ala Moana Center and the Moana Hotel. As an active member of the Junior League she was asked to perform at many of their annual Holiday Balls.

In the 1960's she turned her culinary talents toward starting, with three other women, the Garden Cafe at the Honolulu Academy of Arts. Their huge success allowed the Academy to purchase several valuable works of art. Two years after becoming a member of the Garden Club of Honolulu she was elected President. There she helped in the creation of the Horticulture and Flower Show, which has been such a huge success over the years. She has been a Garden Club of America flower show judge which required traveling throughout the Mainland to judge flower shows which present the various techniques in both horticulture and garden design.

Since moving to the North Shore, Patsy has had a vital role in the many successful projects of the North Shore Outdoor Circle where she was their president for several years. The landscaping of Ke Ala Pupukea bike path, Weinberg Village and, Weed Circle are just some of the projects that she helped bring to fruition.

Fundraising became a necessity to achieve many of those goals especially the landscaping of Weed Circle. In partnership with Hale'iwa Main Street as its Beautification Committee Chair, Patsy got busy planning house tours, luncheons, auctions and anything that would bring in the necessary funds to kick-start this project. She worked tirelessly, and after three years, Patsy's dream became a reality. With grants and tremendous community support, irrigation was installed, trees and shrubs were planted by volunteers and City employees, and the project was completed.

The next major undertaking will be the landscaping of the "triangle" coming into Haleiwa, nicknamed Ka Iwa Garden. Again, the Outdoor Circle and the North Shore Chamber of Commerce are working together on this beautification project - and Patsy is involved.

Her dream is to make and keep our North Shore community as beautiful as Nature has created it, and she hopes to continue to be an active part in the process. At heart, she will always be a country girl.

Mrs. Patsy Gibson will be honored Wednesday, December 5, at the Chamber's annual Christmas Party at Waimea Valley, Pikake Pavilion. For more information, please call the Chamber at 637-4558.

World record youngest climber visit the North Shore

By Devra McVicar

Jordan Romero is the youngest climber at age 13 to reach the top of Mount Everest. At the age of 15 years old, Jordan is the youngest mountain climber to successfully reach all seven highest summits of the world's seven continents, setting the world record. So of course curiosity set in to see the biggest, baddest waves in the world which motivated him to visit the North Shore. Arriving just days after the first big swell in October, he and his family were able to observe 20 foot plus sets. Thrilled to watch, he couldn't wait to try surfing himself. Coming from a mountain town of Big Bear Lake California, thrill seeking sports are just up his alley. Through local friends, Jordan was able to meet local legends Steve Andreas of Sea & Board Sports and Buttons Kaluhiokalani from Buttons surf school to get a Stand Up Paddle lesson and ride the waves. "It was fun! Steve is a great guy and didn't give up on me. Now I am hooked on paddle surfing. So fun, he couldn't wait to do it again the very first thing next morning! Several young Sunset Beach residents had a chance to meet Romero who exchanged questions & answers of his major achievements. I tell people to have a vision and stick with it," he says. Romero and his family enjoyed all of what the North Shore offers. They loved the Waimea Falls, watching the surfers at Sunset Beach, swimming at Waimea Bay, and topping it all off with a delicious dinner with friends at Opals Thai Restaurant in Haleiwa. "I love Opals style with fresh flavorful dishes," Romero says.

One thing is for sure, his visit here with his family was a great break as he continues his US tour which Team Jordan will climb to the highest point in every state, meeting kids, families and their communities. To follow Jordan's tour, go to : <http://www.jordanromero.com/b-i-g-tour>

Waiialua - The Saga of the North Shore

Chapter 20 - Koi

By Kalewa

Koi, a Kahuna-Nui, was a warrior priest of the Pahupu class. Some of his soldiers were tattooed half black / half white. Others were entirely tattooed black, with but their lips and eyes left natural. These were especially wild men in wild times. Koi held title to important heiau at Wailuku, Maui and had served as one of Kahekili's generals during the invasion of O`ahu. He had inherited the rights to officiate at Waimea from his Uncle Kaopulupulu (the subject of Chapter 14), and his father Kaleopuupuu, a close confidant of Kahekili.

After the "Waipio Rebellion" of 1785 (Chapter 19), the people of Waiialua had gained a well deserved reputation for disrespect to the rule of Kahekili, which only became more outspoken when that war-lord went off to fight Kamehameha in 1791, leaving his son Kalanikupule as regent of O`ahu. The North Shore needed to be governed by a strong hand and Koi was the man for that job.

Haole ships, most of them British at first, began visiting the islands in ever increasing numbers in 1786. Waikiki became the port of call for O`ahu. Naturally, the Hawaiian war-chiefs all thirsted for foreign goods, especially the sharp edged weapons, muskets and schooners that were becoming more and more of a factor in the battles being waged then on Maui and Hawai`i.

While both Kamehameha and Kahekili employed westerners to negotiate trade deals and train their men in the use of modern weapons, there was one major difference in their dealings with foreigners; Kamehameha understood that peaceful trade and generally honest dealings would gain better results than deceit and double dealing. Kahekili, while maintaining a diplomatic front, gave secret orders for his men to take weapons from foreigners in any way possible, so long as he was not directly implicated in any treachery.

Koi had met the deserters and beach-combers more or less led by a man named James Coleman in Waikiki and he was not impressed. They were little better as translators than the Hawaiians who had by then begun to return from voyages to China and the Pacific Northwest. These types seemed easy to fool and appeared to have little to contribute other than the goods they could extract from the ships.

Back in Waimea, Koi had heard of the girls from Kealakekua who had been cast away from the "Discovery" back in 1779 (Chapter 17). He summoned Kehu to his headquarters up at the Pu`u Mahuka Heiau. Imagine the meeting of these two peculiar Hawaiians; The densely tattooed elder warrior priest with 1/2 long-haired / 1/2 shaved head and the 30ish year-old red-headed girl from Kau with curiously light colored eyes.

Kehu, still smarting from her rejection, recounted the famous details of death of Lono and of the events before and after. She was quick to explain the command structure aboard the ships and the tactics used in battle. "They all follow the ones with the bright white or blue clothing and tri-angle hats, regardless of age. Some of them carry the fire-sticks, and sharp pahu, but only the ones dressed in red are dangerous...They give away valuable pieces of iron for almost anything, even more when they drink too much of their special awa. Yes, the ships can make great noise and throw rocks very far, but they seldom kill people, usually just knocking down trees and houses....Their ships and row-boats are much slower than canoes...They always need food and water and the men are crazily distracted by women of all classes."

On the afternoon of May 7, 1792, a tubby merchant ship named "Daedalus" carrying spoiled goods for a British naval expedition was seen dropping anchor three miles off Waimea.
