Legislature Rolls the Dice with Ohana Zones

Now that the 2018 State Legislature has staked out its position on homelessness by appropriating $30 million to establish as many as six "Ohana Zones" statewide, it's up to Governor David Ige to decide how to move forward - or not.

The Legislature sidestepped the hand-wringing problem of where these zones would be placed. They did the easy part, and left it to the Governor and the Counties to face the communities that will be asked to accept an Ohana Zone.

Senate Bill 2401 also says that these zones on public lands will provide "secure dwelling spaces" that will be "paired with intensive services, including health care and transportation." The type of dwelling is not specified.

For the record, however, both Governor Ige and Honolulu Mayor Kirk Caldwell are no fans of safe zones, or tent cities, as they are better known. They argue for expending our limited resources on finding or creating permanent housing, such as the Housing First model, that also includes wrap-around services.

This is where it gets really interesting. The City is now authorized to enforce sidewalk and stored property laws in State-owned Kakaako. The homeless there will need to either accept shelter or move on to other areas. This will cause new homeless encampments to pop up, or increase the populations in other areas where the homeless are already established.

Honolulu is far short of the housing it needs to fully implement Housing First type solutions. And building the needed housing is a time-consuming and long-term proposition.

The need is now and we may have no choice but to find a way to fit Ohana Zones into the equation while we pursue the permanent solutions. SB2401 will prove problematic, but the Legislature has decided it's worth the gamble.

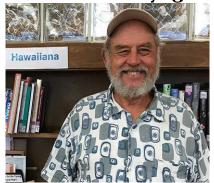

The City may be a little ahead of the game. Last November, the City Council adopted Resolution 17-277, CD1, FD1, authorizing the City Administration to identify lands that can be used as temporary legal encampments for the homeless.

How these supposed safe-refuge Ohana Zones are to be operated is not addressed in SB2401, but you can bet that the Legislature won't be pleased with something nonchalant, with few rules or procedures, to account for that $30 million.

But that is precisely the kind of place that would attract the long-time homeless who are inured to life on the streets.

2018 Legislature Wraps Up

What felt like a rather quiet and uneventful legislative session turned out to be rather productive. The 2018 Legislative Session ended on May 3rd with passage of some big initiatives and new policy statements. Homelessness and affordable housing projects received large infusions of money, $125 million was allocated for flooding disaster relief on Kauai and East Honolulu, a new state property tax is up for a public vote in November, and Physician Assisted Suicide passed earlier in the session.

In a major move to support affordable housing, the Rental Housing Trust Fund is allotted an additional $200 million. This cash infusion is expected to result in the creation of as many as 1,600 affordable rental housing units for families at or below 80 percent AMI. The same measure, HB2748, appropriates $10 million for interim financing of affordable housing, and grants substantial tax exemptions for creation of new affordable housing for households up to 140 percent AMI.

A big push was made to address the homeless crisis through two measures that provide $34.7 million for safe zone projects and wrap around services. The state budget includes $15 million to fund homeless programs and services such as Housing First, Rapid Re-Housing, and Family Assessment Centers. Other measures allot various sums for related projects.

If you have not yet heard of Oxybenzone and Octinoxate, you should know these sunscreen chemicals have been shown to damage coral. Obviously, vibrant coral reefs are essential to the health of our coastal waters and protection of our shorelines. I am pleased to have participated in the legislative process to ban the sale in Hawaii of sunscreen containing these harmful chemicals, beginning in 2021. In the meantime, please read labels and avoid these two ingredients.

Another hot topic for many people in our district has been concern over potential health risks of the pesticide chlorpyrifos, a restricted use pesticide (RUP) that the EPA considered banning nationally. RUPs require additional safeguards for use and can only be applied by certified applicators. While chlorpyrifos use has been in decline, some agricultural operations will need time to transition, so exemptions from the Department of Agriculture may be granted for a few years. SB3095 also requires public reporting of RUP use above certain levels and mandates a 100-foot buffer zone around schools if pesticides are applied during school hours.

The trend of voting early at select sites and voting by mail is steadily increasing. In fact, more votes were cast by mail or early walk-in than at the polling places in 2016. In light of this, a pilot project to vote by mail on Kauai will begin in 2020. In person voting will still be allowed at limited polling places, but the widespread, local voting places will be phased out. Depending on how it goes on Kauai, this voting system could be expanded throughout the state.

In an earlier article, I discussed the Physician Assisted Suicide/Death with Dignity Bill. I will discuss the likely consequences of a new state-wide property tax in a later article. There are other bills worthy of mention, but space permits only a brief list of highlights.

Aloha Friends and Neighbors!

As I am celebrating my first Mother's Day with my son Noah, I wanted to take the time to give a special shout out to my wonderful mother Sharon Peterson Cheape for her selflessness and love. As well as wish all of you a very Happy Mother's Day! I hope you are able to spend time with your families and the loved ones who are influential in your life!

At the Hawaii State Capitol, the legislative session has officially come to an end! All of the bills that were submitted at the beginning of 2018 and have passed every committee as well as a final floor vote are now on the Governor's desk waiting to be signed and enacted into law. Mahalo for reaching out to my office to express your support or opposition to current bills, and thank you to those who formally submitted testimony during the legislative process this year. Please continue to contact me during the interim as we prepare and research legislation to introduce next year. During this past 2018 legislative session, I served on four House Committees (Economic Development & Business, Education, Higher Education, and Labor & Public Employment), where I had the opportunity to hear testimonies and weigh in on important issues. For a complete list of bills that have passed this legislative session, please visit the State Capitol Website: www. capitol.hawaii.gov.

A few weeks ago I sent letters to all my constituents just reminding everyone that every year when the legislature is not in session, I walk door to door to the homes in my district to learn constituents' concerns and to pass along helpful information. I look forward to meeting with you at your homes every year. I want you to know that I am also available to meet you in the community if you'd like to schedule a meeting. I'm always eager to hear from you if you have any questions, concerns, or ideas.

Also, as we all head into summer and water activities ramp up, May 19-26 starts a string of events for National Safe Boating Week. Nationally, in 2016, there were 701 reported deaths, and 83 percent of those victims were not wearing a lifejacket. Of the 701 deaths nationally, eight of those deaths were here in Hawaii. The North Shore is full of water activities, especially in the summer. Many of these water activities include non-motorized vessels such as snorkeling, surfing, stand up paddleboarding, and kayaking. I would like to stress the importance of safety for any water activities and always have a buddy or tell a friend about your water plans for the day and an expected time you will be back on land or home. A great website to visit for more boating and water recreation activity education is http://dlnr.hawaii.gov/dobor/.

The Safe Boating Campaign promotes wearing a life jacket while boating. Upcoming Safe Boating Campaign events and activities include:

May 18: Wear Your Life Jacket to Work Day – This annual event is a fun, educational way to share information about life jackets with others. Boaters are encouraged to wear their life jacket to work, snap a picture and share on social media with the hashtags #lifejacket2work and #safeboating.

May 19-25: National Safe Boating Week – This annual awareness boating safety week is the kick off for the yearlong Safe Boating Campaign. Boating safety advocates are encouraged to plan an event in their community, and share #safeboatingweek and #safeboating information on social media using campaign resources.

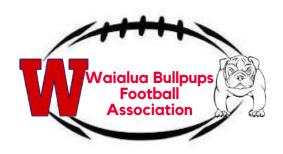

May 19, June 9, July 7, August 11 – Ready, Set, Wear It events – All who enjoy boating can participate in one of these four events to raise awareness about the importance of wearing a life jacket and available life jacket styles. Boating safety advocates can find resources to plan a #RSWI2018 event in their local community at www.safeboating-campaign.com.

Congestive Heart Failure

Congestive heart failure (CHF) is a disorder that affects the heart's ability to pump blood effectively to the rest of your body. It affects approximately 5 million people in the U.S. and occurs predominantly in the elderly with almost 80% of cases occurring in those 65 years or older. CHF is a result of abnormalities in the heart structure (valve disorders, enlargement), abnormal rhythm, and poor function due to heart attacks and high blood pressure. CHF also occurs more often in people with multiple problems, such as high blood pressure, diabetes, angina, and chronic lung disease. When the heart muscle is unable to pump adequate blood out of the heart, fluid backs up into areas such as the lungs and ankles. People with significant CHF are unable to sleep in a flat position and need several pillows to sleep.

The goals for treatment of CHF are to relieve symptoms, avoid hospitalizations and prolong life. Treatment consists of medications that help the heart muscle pumpmore effectively and reduce fluid retention. It is important for a person with CHF to eat a low sodium diet since sodium in the body retains more fluid. Another approach is implantation of a device (below the left collar bone and above the heart) that is a pacemaker/defibrillator. The pacemaker helps establish a more normal pulse rate, especially in those with low pulse rates. The defibrillator shocks the heart into a normal rhythm when the electrical conduction of the heart goes crazy.

Studies indicate that the 2-year mortality rate for those with CHF approaches 50%. So, the best way to deal with CHF is to take measures to avoid it in the first place. Get your blood pressure and diabetes in good control. Stop smoking since nicotine increases your blood pressure and likelihood of blood clots, causes coronary heart disease and builds up fat in the arteries. Stop using drugs such as ice, which causes an enlarged heart and eventually failure. If you are obese, begin exercising, eat healthier and lose weight. Extra weight puts extra work on the heart. Here's to a healthier heart!

Talking Story with Tom Jacobs

The New Haleiwa Hotel ... a Missed Opportunity

In 1888, Ben Dillingham had a problem. He had built Oahu's first railroad to haul sugar cane from the North Shore into town, but his trains returned to the "country" empty ... Dillingham had no return load. He solved his problem by building a modern, Victorian-style, 40 room hotel on the North Shore, opening in 1899. Now his trains carried well-to-do "townies" and mainland visitors on their return from Honolulu. His "Haleiwa Hotel" featured a dramatic staircase to the second floor, scenic ocean and mauka views, in-suite telephones and electric lighting, separate private cottages, shooting opportunity at a "Men's Lodge," boating tours, and a billiards room. A stable allowed horseback tours of the nearby sugar mill. Later, a 9-hole golf course was added. It was the first of Oahu's premier hotels: the Moana in Waikiki opened a year later, the Royal Hawaiian not until 1927.

Over time the Haleiwa Hotel lost its battle with newer hotels in Waikiki. It became a private beach club, then an Army officer's recreation center during World War II. It was demolished in 1952, but not before giving its name to Haleiwa Town, the picturesque plantation town that grew up around it.

A few years ago, Andy Anderson, a local entrepreneur and developer, pursued his dream of recreating a replica of the original Haleiwa Hotel. It was to be his last, best project, his gift to the North Shore. He purchased the Jameson's Restaurant building across from Haleiwa Beach Park and drew up architectural plans for a new Haleiwa Hotel on that site. And ... his plans generated local opposition. Some residents opposed any "Waikiki look-alike" in the country ... never mind that Anderson was only contemplating 40-odd rooms, with the original architecture. Other locals viewed a resurgent Haleiwa Hotel as a great idea, so controversy grew. As prospects for Anderson's hotel at the Jameson's property dimmed, he changed plans. He rebuilt the Jameson's building and opened his Beach House restaurant, a classy, beautiful addition to the North Shore that has taken its place alongside other local first-rate eateries like Haleiwa Joe's, Roy's, and Lei Lei's.

... and Andy Anderson made one more try. He transferred his planned Haleiwa Hotel to an oceanfront site between Haleiwa Beach Park and Pua'ena Point. Surely this out-of-the-way location wouldn't offend the local community. Except ... Kamehameha Schools, owner of Anderson's proposed site, declined a proposed lease or sale. After nearly a year's encouragement to Anderson, Kamehameha Schools determined that the proposed hotel location contained probable historically significant sites and/ or other impediments to development. This assessment was made in spite of an exhaustive archeological study showing no such evidence, probably because the location had been graded years earlier to locate a World War II airstrip. Regardless, as Anderson told me, "Kamehameha Schools owns the land and is free to determine its ultimate use, which they did. Damn!"

So Anderson's dream has dimmed, and the North Shore has missed an opportunity to recreate an architectural and historical North Shore icon and gem. It's just too damned bad.

Torches and other Gingers in Waimea ValleyBy David Orr, Botanical Collections Specialist, Waimea Valley on Oa'hu's North Shore.

Spring is the time when many gingers start flowering or emerge from underground dormancy. Many waxy, long-lasting flowers of Etlingera, the genus for the torch ginger, are starting to bloom in Waimea Valley's "Torch Ginger Alley" in the farthest (from the main road) part of the large Ginger/Heliconia collection between the 2nd and 3rd bridges. The "Alley" is planted next to the one tributary stream, the Kaiwiko'ele that flows for about 200 yards from this spot before joining the main waterfall stream under the 2nd bridge.

The flowers of all torch gingers grow on a separate stalk from the tall, arching leaves. Twenty accessions, four wild-collected, have come to Waimea since 1975. The most well-known species is Etlingera elatior of which we have at least five forms. The beautiful pure white form is at the far end of the "Alley". Halfway in are the common red and one that came as "Porcelain Pink" with uniform pink petals. Other pink torches in the Valley will make a ring of red flowers atop the pink head. One uncommon red torch has extremely narrow white edges to all the petals. Two less commonly grown torches are on both sides of the entrance: The "Malay Rose" is E. venusta with grey, pink, and white parts to its flower head, and opposite is the "Rose of Siam", E. corneri, as it was officially named by former Pupukea resident and Waimea botanist, John Mood. John also discovered a new species in Borneo which he named E. rubromarginata with a low inflorescence uphill from the white torch. Closest to the stream is a large stand of the "Tulip Torch Ginger" E. hemisphaerica with tall side petals resembling a tulip as it's growing before a mass of its small yellow-edged flowers splay out to make it become a very different looking inflorescence.

There are no native gingers in Hawai'i, however, the Polynesians brought two useful species which are planted all over the Valley. They've been completely underground for the last few months, but are now awakening with the spring rains and longer days. There's only one genus of ginger in all of the Americas, yet the diversity in Asia is staggering and many have evolved to cope with the monsoonal rains that are common there. Before and after the monsoons are long, dry periods, and the plants have learned to retreat to their underground rhizomes in a sort of hibernation before the rains come back. The two Asian gingers brought to Hawaii before contact are the 'awapuhi and 'olena. The first is the "shampoo ginger" (really used as a conditioner), Zingiber zerumbet, and the second is turmeric, the indispensable (and orange colored) part of any curry, Curcuma longa, which is also one of nature's best medicinal plants, an anti-inflammatory which fights infections.

Throughout the collection, Kaempferia and Curcuma species are appearing for their summer performance. For some species, like K. pulchra, the peacock lily, richly patterned leaves come up first. Many species of Curcuma send up their pink, yellow and green flowers before their leaves which all can be seen at the Ginger and Heliconia Garden.

We invite you to come and enjoy this botanical beauty, May and June are optimal months bring the family for a stroll through our Torch Ginger Alley.

Waialua High School's Project Grad Pa'ina Night A Big Success

On behalf of the Waialua High School Project Graduation 2018 Committee, a big mahalo to all who supported and attended our "Pa'ina Night" at Dot's Wahiawa on March 17, 2018. It was a fun-filled evening shared with family and friends who came from our community and afar. The fundraiser exceeded our expectations with many cool raffle prizes, a live auction of sports memorabilia and eclectic art collection from local artists. The entertainment line-up was equally amazing, making this event very special.

A big shout out to the following sponsors and supporters who helped make it possible: Marlene Abrigo • Dale Andres • Don Arakaki & Uncle Tom - Old Soldiers of Hawaii (World War II Veterans) • Bobby Bunda • Juni Calaro • TJ Miram Cuaresma • Leslie Drechsler • Kamakakehau Fernandez • Dee Franks • Micah Hatchie • Stephanie Hatchie • John

Ho'ola Na Pua celebrates Pearl Haven Campus Site Blessing & Ground Breaking

Haleiwa, HI- Bettina Mehnert, President & Chief Executive Officer, AHL (formerly Architects Hawaii, Ltd), Elected Officials, Distinguished Guests, the Board of Directors of Hoʻola Na Pua and its staff and volunteers celebrated with a traditional Hawaiian blessing and hula lead by Kimo and Leilani Kahoano to bless the new site of the Pearl Haven Campus.

Ho'ola Na Pua (HNP) is developing Hawaii's first licensed residential special treatment campus for underage females who have been sexually exploited. It's a sanctuary of healing. We call it Pearl Haven.

The Pearl Haven Campus is situated on 12 acres of pristine rural community on the Island of Oahu. The grounds will have brand new gardens and greenhouses. In the center of these grounds will stand the newly renovated 20,000 square foot, sustainable Pearl Haven therapeutic facility. The existing structure needs near total renovation. Some of the existing structure will remain but more than 90% of the campus will undergo renovation.

"Pearl Haven will be a sanctuary for our most vulnerable in our community: our children," Munoz (President/Co-Founder HNP) said. "We are thankful for the community coming together to create the safety net and response services needed for exploited girls. This is about hope, healing and renewal for children and their families."

There are many stakeholders invested in this first-of-its-kind project – from the State of Hawaii to the Department of Land and Natural Resources to elected officials. The renovation project is part of AHL's 1% Pro Bono Program, an annual program that provides pro bono architectural services to nonprofits. As part of the program, AHL brings together a team of partners who are also giving pro bono services. The project, co-led by Design Partners Incorporated, includes: KAI Hawaii, Inc., InSynergy Engineering, Inc. and Minatoishi Architects.

"I cannot say enough about the team of Ho'ola Na Pua for taking on such a big venture at Pearl Haven. I thank them for bringing the sex traffic trade out in the open for our girls that deserve so much more," remarked Sarah Cadiz, First Hawaiian Bank branch manager, Haleiwa.

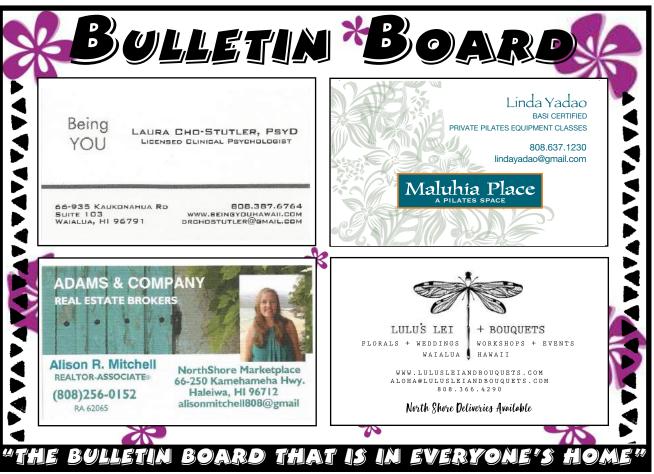

The celebration was marked with many of the community's business leaders and elected officials. Both offices of Congresswoman Tulsi Gabbard and the Lt. Governor Doug Chin offered congratulatory remarks as did Council Member Kymberly Marcos Pine in person. Harry Saunders, Chairman of HomeAid Hawaii, one of the many supporting organizations, challenged the guests to support HNP with their time, talent and resources.
